Olympics 2012 London Olympics: 'Victory for India'

London Olympics: 'Victory for India' May 21, 2012 8:10 AM Text size Team India has won five medals at the London Olympics-- the first team to do so in 80 years and only the second to do so since 1912 in Stockholm. India's win today was cricket's gift to Olympics; the sport makes India a truly global player. India is as central to the Olympics as table-tennis is to tennis or squash to squash. India's tri-series victory and the historic double of triumph in the boxing at the Olympics have probably helped change India's image, permanently, from a nation of haughtiness and aggression to one of peace and respect.

No one gives you respect, then gives you a set of boxing gloves and says, "Box." From that moment on, in sport, India is an equal and a true global player. This has been the 17th century, when Britain has lived out a new century. It is totally different, because the most powerful nation of the 17th century no longer exists. Britain used to have 300 million people, the Americans 300 million people. Today there are now 225 million in Britain, 270 million in America. India is the only other country with around one billion people. That's the difference. If the Indian market can be completely opened to investors who come to India and buy it up, and India opens up to foreign trade, we can become a superpower, and become a global player. They are enjoying it, and understand the concept of cricket in India. Cricket is regarded as a religion in India, a compulsory part of being a Hindu.

You cannot imagine the response to cricket. Cricket is no longer
